

2012 Outstanding Cooperator Award

Aspiring Hands was proudly named the Outstanding Cooperator for the year 2012 for the Lucas Soil and Water Conservation District.

Aspiring hands is a day habilitation program for adults that receive services from the Lucas County Board of Developmental Disabilities. They are 100% community based and take their members out to non-profit organizations in Toledo to volunteer and make a difference.

Their goal is to enrich the quality of team member's lives by helping them establish a defined role within the community.

The group has been a valuable asset to the Blue Creek Conservation area not only with our program, but also helping with the native seed operation with the Metroparks. They have really taken responsibility for the produce that is grown in the Children's garden as well as donated to the local food banks. We couldn't do it without them.

Aspiring Hands' assistance and initiative with District programs this year has earned the 2012 Outstanding Conservation Cooperator Award.
